These coins, altho' now scarce, are not at all in demand among our coin-collectors, & will not bring more than intrinsic value.

Outside of U.S. coinage, which is chiefly sought for, the inquiry is for antiques, & mediæval; & modern down to about A.D. 1700; which latter command a moderate advance.

Dear Sir

On next leaf I have roughly pictured some old Coins which I think are rare. As you have superior knowledge respecting such matters and withal a complete suit of Coins for comparison, I seek an opinion from you.

Please take each one up seperately & let me know how rare & what value collectors place upon it. As you observe they are sharp & well preserved.

You may think, and very properly too, that I ought to have written to a professional Numismatist — my excuse is that I am so in the habit of looking to the Mint as authority on Coins that I find it hard to divert my attention elsewhere, and then I place more reliance on what you say than I would on the word of a stranger.

Give my respects to Prof. Du Bois and ask him to assist you in this.

I have divided this package into two parts, marked 26 A & 26 B, and for special reasons would ask, if it be allowable, a separate assay and statement of 26 A, with such note as will identify this part; it is extremely base, and I desire you to treat it precisely as you would in the case of an ordinary depositor. From this point on, this package may be dealt with as a whole.

Sir

Please send me copies of your "Circulars" in regard to deposits of Gold & Silver for coinage &c.

I have frequent enquiry for the value &c of punched coins — Gold, Silver, Nickel &c — and the better to enable me to answer correctly I would ask what your rules are in regard to them.

The reply in regard to Gold is very easily made, silver is more difficult & most difficult of all is the answer in regard to Nickel. I suppose you would not hesitate to redeem nickels with holes in them as the loss in wt. affects them so little, they being "fiat money" any how. You can post me in regard to all of these coins.

Dear Sir

I would respectfully enquire whether you have in the Govt. collection a gold $1 1861 coined at Dahlonega Ga — if not what would such an one be worth?

Was the $1. coined at N. C. in 1857?

Of the Bechtler coins, or tokens, what is your assortment? C. B. was the father & made $1 & 2.50 1845. "Carolina Gold" and "Georgia Gold". A. B. his son made the same coins & milled them.

They both did honest work & died poor.

The dies used in this coinage could be bought for about $15. and would be a good acquisition to the Govt. museum.

Yours Very Respectfully

BUREAU OF THE MINT,

Washington, D. C., July 2nd, 1883.

Sir:

I transmit herewith copy of letter dated June 7, 1877, from Messrs Orr, Hess and Morgan giving a list of certain patterns and Mint machinery on storage with them; the same having been forwarded from the old Mint at Charlotte, N. C.

I am informed by Mr Arthur Orr, that the machinery is still on storage, and has never been unboxed since its receipt by them.

I have to request that you will cause an examination of the same to be made, and if after such examination you find that any part of the same can be utilized at your Mint, you will avail yourself of the same. If it cannot be made of service, I think it advisable that the same be disposed of to the best advantage, and the proceeds deposited in the Treasury; and you are authorized to make such disposition of the same as you may deem best for the interest of the Government.

Phila. July 23rd 1883

Hon A London Snowden
Supt of the U.S. Mint

Sir

According to instructions, I have removed the coining machinery belonging to the (Charlott N. C. Mint) Government from Orr Hess and Morgan, to the Mint. Have unboxed and examined same. It consists of one (1) Cutting Press one (1) Draw Bench one (1) pair of Pointing Rolls one (1) Milling Machine and one (1) Coining Press. The Cutting Press is entirely behind the times, it has no meanes of raising or lowering the Punch or of altering the bed. Your Hon. found two of same construction useless in comparison with once built under your supervision, and sold them for old Iron. The Draw Bench, I never saw it or one like it in operation but from its construction it is of no account, not practicable and from what I can learn was built from drawings made by Mr Peale, then Chief Coiner of the U S. Mint; was intended to be driven by steam acting expancively in a cylinder with regular let on and cut off valves, this machine was aban-doned from the fact that the strips was pulled through the dies at such a fearfull velocity that the strips was often broken in two or three pieces the men who were working on it came near having their fingers cut off and were frequently cut, Mr Peale had not experimented far enough to have the parts fully under control in fact it would fly like a bullet from a gun, he abandoned making a steam Draw Bench and so altered the machine by moving rack and Pinion Wheel as to be able to use it in the Charlott mint it was never of much account being entirely to slow and very complicated, one of our machines will do more work in one hour than Peales experiment would do in a day.

Milling machine is similar to what we have in use with the exception that ours are of later date and very much improved as to manner of holding the jaws. Pointing Rolls are the same as in use here with but few exceptions and those not material.
Coining Press is a rough unfinished Machine only the working parts have been finished, the manner of holding up the Beam and Triangle are very defective being held up by an eliptic spring liable to be broken at any moment letting the Beam, Head Block and Centre piece down on the one working the prese, the ones used here are held up by two bolts through the arch (called bridals) making it very secure.

Now these machines have been stored away since the early part of Dr Linderman's administration and have became very much rusted and defaced it would require them to be rebuilt to do any thing with them and to rebuild would cost almost as much as new machines, and you would have but old machines

Parts of Milling Machine, Pointing Rolls and Coining Press might be saved and the rest sold for old material

Most Respct
Yours
W H Webb
